The company provided an operational trading update on 31 August, when it confirmed that for the five months ended 31 July 2026, Altron's continuing operations saw revenue growth in the low-single digits and EBITDA and operating profit growth in the low-to-mid teens. As the company is now reasonably certain that results for H127 will differ by at least 20% from those in the comparative period, it has provided EPS ranges. We note that the company sold Nexus with effect from 1 August 2025 so H126 results include five months of Nexus's trading within discontinued operations. All measures are in ZAR cents.

Continuing operations HEPS is expected to be 107–112 (H126: 96), up 11–17%; continuing operations EPS is expected to be 93–98 (H126: 84), up 11–17%.

Group operations HEPS is expected to be 105–110 (H126: 87), up 21–27%; group operations EPS is expected to be 93–97 (H126: 66), up 41–47%.
