The contract highlights the company's growing exposure to the defence industry and ongoing efforts to diversify the business. We maintain our forecasts.

Filtronic has received an authorisation to proceed (ATP) from a major European defence prime for the supply of high-performance active components for the next phase of a long-standing electronic sensor programme for a defence contract. The ATP allows Filtronic to commence work on the project prior to receiving a purchase order in Q1 CY26 and is worth c £7m. The total value of the contract is expected to be £11m for a two-year programme. The components will be manufactured at the company's new secure, automated microelectronics facility in Sedgefield.

We assume that the contract will start to ship in late FY27, with the bulk in FY28. We view the contract as supportive of our forecasts and we maintain our estimates.
